A WELCOME TO JABEZ SPENCER BALFOUR
[published by Aleister Crowley under the name "E.A.C."]

Great Liberator, come again,
Thy country needs thee sadly;
In Scotland Yard they all complain,
They "want" thee—oh, so badly!

Thou canst not tell the signs and sobs
That for thy presence yearn;
And the great heart of England throbs
With joy at thy return.

A change of work is rest, they say,
So honest toil shall rest thee,
No fears that thou must go away
Need haunt thee and molest thee.

We pray a level-headed set
Of fellow-men, who know thee,
In some small measure, grateful yet,
May pay thee what we owe thee.
