Misinforming a Nation

By Willard Huntington Wright

Mr. Wright's work is a declaration of intellectual independence for those who aspire to American culture.

It is devoted in part to a merciless, scathing analysis of the Encyclopedia Britannica. "No more vicious and dangerous educational influence on America can readily be conceived than the articles in this encyclopedia."

"England," insists Mr. Wright, "has shown the same ruthlessness and unscrupulousness in her intellectual colonization of America as in her territorial colonizations; and she has also exhibited the same persistent shrewdness."

THE VAMPIRE OF THE CONTINENT

By Count Ernst zu Reventlow

Count Ernst zu Reventlow has flashed a new light on the pages of history. His revelation of England's career among the nations of the world created a sensation on the Continent and in the United States. Every effort has been made by the British Government to prevent the circulation of this great work. Out of three hundred copies originally sent to America only one ever reached its destination. That one was brought to us by the "U-Deutschland." Order your copy at once.
