DIVORCE CASE.

Edinburgh, Wednesday.

In the Court of Session, Edinburgh, to-day, Lord Salveson, granted a divorce, with custody of the child and £52 a year alimony for the latter, to Rose Edith Kelly, or Crowley, from Alister [sic] MacGregor Crowley, of Boleskine, Foyers, Inverness-shire, and residing in London. The suit was undefended.

The plaintiff said in 1902, when she was a widow, she met the defendant, who called himself Count Skellet. Later he called himself MacGregor, to identify himself with Scotland, where he had bought an estate. After marriage he called himself Lord Boleskine, saying people in Scotland called themselves after their estates. In July last she left him, and by accidentally opening a letter she ascertained he was father of a child borne by another lady.

Plaintiff's brother said defendant was very proud of having, as he thought, Scottish blood in his veins. He invented a new kind of religion. He was a Cabalist, and studied ancient manuscripts. Defendant got some mark of distinction from an Indian Chief, and thereupon called himself Lord Boleskine. There was a lot of land round Boleskine, but it was mostly perpendicular. Defendant's father was a Plymouth Brother. He had lots of money, but was stupid where money was concerned.

His Lordship thought he might assume the defendant's domicile was Scottish, whatever it was originally, and granted the decree.
