

THE SPECTATOR
LONDON, ENGLAND
18 NOVEMBER 1922
(page 745)

COLLINS

48 Pall Mall, S.W. 1.

MR. LLOYD GEORGE

E. T. RAYMOND. 15s. net.

"An extraordinarily penetrating analysis of Mr. Lloyd George's character."—"The Outlook."

Piracy

MICHAEL ARLEN. 7s. 6d. net.

First Edition Exhausted.
Second Edition Nearly Ready.
Third Edition Ordered.

"Inordinately clever. . . . An epigram on almost every page."—W. L. Courtney.

Mystery at Geneva

ROSE MACAULAY. 7s. 6d. net.

"With her wit Miss Macaulay has changed this well-intentioned, ineffective committee meeting of foreigners and good men by the shore of Lake Geneva into a sparkling summary of human nature."
—"Time and Tide."

A Fine Detective Story.

The Pit-Prop Syndicate

FREEMAN WILLS CROFTS. 7s. 6d. net.

Author of "The Cask" and "The Ponson Case."
"Last and greatest of detective story writers."
—"The Outlook."

The Beautiful and Damned

F. SCOTT FITZGERALD. 7s. 6d. net.

"The book is too powerful merely to be labelled sensational, and its irony is no more bitter than that of life itself."—"Time and Tide."

The Diary of a Drug-Fiend

ALEISTER CROWLEY. 7s. 6d. net.

"One of the most extraordinary revelations."
—"Daily Sketch."

Pender Among the Residents

FORREST REID. 7s. 6d. net.

Charming, witty, uncanny.

Roseanne

E. MARIA ALBANESI. 7s. 6d. net.

Which shows this popular author at her best.