

THE BOSTON TRAVELER
BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS
28 FEBRUARY 1957
(page 24)

Curry Fad Catches On.

The craze for curries. . . . which overtook New Yorkers long ago . . . has finally caught up with Bostonians.

The young married set has taken curry to their hearts . . . it's so easy to serve and makes such a heavenly buffet dish. And hardly a day goes by but a call comes in for a "REALLY good curry, please."

A good curry . . . as Londoner Aleister Crowley says . . . should sting like a serpent and stimulate like strychnine!

"It should be subtle . . . sublime . . . and inscrutably inspiring."

[. . .]