

AN ADVENTURE. Anonymous.

This little book appears to be the production of an extremely clever young man.

But he should have taken more pains to make the literary style of "Miss Morrison" different from that of "Miss Lamond"; and he should have shown the MS. to a lady. The most improbable event recorded is this: one of two modern ladies, walking at Versailles, sees a woman dressed in the clothes of the period of Louis XVI.—and makes no remark!

I don't think!

S. HOLMES.